The San Diego Regional Center (SDRC) provides a variety of services to persons with developmental disabilities, their families, and the community. The primary goal of the SDRC is to provide support services that allow the client to live as independently as possible. To achieve this goal, service coordinators assist in securing needed services through community agencies, referral and/or purchase. During the development of the Individual Program Plan (IPP), the planning team reviews all available community supports and may purchase services that are necessary and not available through other organizations.
